WHITE SUPREMACY in GLOBAL CONTEXT

IN-PERSON AND VIA ZOOM

In recent years the transnational dimensions of far-right, racially motivated extremism have become unmistakable. The texts and manifestos of far-right networks circulate widely on the Internet, radicalizing new groups and spawning racially motivated acts of terrorism by actors who, despite being separated by continents, nevertheless share a common set of beliefs, hatreds, tactics, and objectives.

Join scholars and analysts Cynthia Miller-Idriss and Esther Adaire as they trace the underlying commonalities that unite the global far right.

Dr. Esther Elizabeth Adaire is an intelligence analyst specializing in racially motivated violent extremism at a leading US law-enforcement agency, and the author of Neo-Nazi Postmodern: Right-Wing Terror Tactics, the Intellectual New Right, and the Destabilization of Memory in Germany since 1989.

Dr. Cynthia Miller-Idriss is a Professor in the School of Public Affairs at the American University in Washington, DC, where she is also the founding director of the Polarization and Extremism Research and Innovation Lab (PERIL). She is the author of several books, among which is her most recent, Hate in the Homeland: The New Global Far Right (2022).
